What is the First-tier Tribunal (Asylum Support)?

The First-tier Tribunal is a specialist tribunal which deals with appeals against decisions to refuse or discontinue financial support and accommodation, otherwise known as asylum support. This is support provided under s95 or s4 of the Immigration and Asylum Act (IAA) 1999. The Tribunal does not deal with immigration or asylum claim appeals. It is independent from the Home Office (HO).

It is the only tribunal in the UK that deals with asylum support appeals. It is run by the Ministry of Justice and is located at the Import Building (formerly Anchorage House) in East London. It is governed by a set of regulations. You can find a link to these regulations at the end of this factsheet. They set out the procedures surrounding the appeal itself, such as the time frame in which appeals should be made. The judges who hear and make decisions on appeals at the Tribunal are called Tribunal Judges.

Who can Appeal to the First-tier Tribunal (Asylum Support)?

Anyone who has received a decision by the HO to refuse or discontinue asylum support can appeal to the Tribunal, with certain exceptions (see below).

A refusal of support is when an asylum-seeker, who has applied for s95 support or s4 support, receives a negative decision from the HO. A discontinuation of support is when the HO decides that an asylum-seeker, who is currently receiving asylum support, is no longer eligible for that support. The decision letter sent by the HO caseworker to the asylum seeker should give reasons why support is being refused or discontinued. Where the person has a right of appeal to the Tribunal, an appeal form, known as the Notice of Appeal, should be included with the HO decision letter. The appeal form can also be downloaded from the gov.uk link below. See Factsheet 4 on how to fill it in.

When is there no right of appeal to the First-tier Tribunal (Asylum Support)?

Whether a decision is appealable or not is contained in statute.¹ Therefore it is not something that the HO has the power to grant or not. If the decision letter does not state that there is a right of appeal but you consider that there should be, then lodge an appeal anyway and/or contact ASAP.

There is no right of appeal where someone's s95 support is terminated because their asylum claim has been fully decided.² This is the point at which they become 'appeals rights exhausted' (ARE). However, there is a right of appeal if their support has been terminated prematurely i.e. they are not yet ARE, but are still an asylum-seeker.

There is a right of appeal against the discontinuation of s4 support.³

There is no right of appeal to the Tribunal for asylum-seekers who are refused support because the HO believes they have not claimed asylum 'as soon as reasonably practicable'. These are known as 'Section 55' decisions.⁴ However, as a result of a ruling in May 2005, known as the Limbuela case, the HO can only refuse to support asylum-seekers under s55 if it is satisfied that the individual has some other source of accommodation or support available to them.⁵ Therefore, in practice, the HO generally only considers making s55 decisions when an applicant applies for 'subsistence only' s95 support. (See Factsheet 1 on Section 95 support).

There is no right of appeal if the HO refuses an application under s57 of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002. Section 57 allows the HO to refuse an application for support if it is not satisfied that the information provided by the applicant is complete or accurate, or that the applicant is co-operating with HO enquiries for further information. Section 57 only applies to s95 support applications.

What issues can the Tribunal consider?

Appeals are limited to the decision by the HO to refuse or discontinue support. The Tribunal will not look at the type of support given, or whether the level of asylum support is adequate. It is not possible to appeal against the location or type of accommodation. Decisions which are not appealable can potentially be challenged by judicial review.

It is not the Tribunal's role to consider appellants' asylum claims; these are heard by

² IAA 1999 s103(2)

³ IAA 1999 s103(2A)

⁴ Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 s55

⁵ R (Limbuela and others (Shelter intervener)) v SSHD [2005] UKHL 66

a different court, the First-tier Tribunal (Asylum and Immigration).

However, issues concerning the appellant's asylum claim can be relevant, for example when a refused asylum-seeker has made a fresh application for asylum and this has yet to be considered by the HO. Their asylum support appeal would therefore be on the grounds that removal of support would be a breach of their human rights, because they still have an outstanding claim in the UK. Although asylum support judges cannot make a decision on this new asylum application, they can dismiss the asylum support appeal if they believe the new claim is 'manifestly unfounded' or 'hopeless or abusive'. Therefore, the appellant needs to show that the new application does not simply repeat material that has previously been submitted to the HO. (See Factsheets 2 and 12 on Section 4 and on Section 4 and Human Rights).

Assistance with getting to the Tribunal

To ensure the person making the appeal is able to attend the Tribunal, the HO will normally send travel tickets to the address in Section 2 of the Notice of Appeal. Where necessary, it will also provide overnight accommodation on the night before the hearing (for those living at a distance from London e.g. Scotland). If the person has difficulty travelling to the Tribunal (e.g. because of health problems) they can request that the appeal be heard by video link from a court near where they live. The Tribunal decides whether or not to grant this request. The HO then pays for the person to travel to the local court.

Time limits for making an Appeal

There is a very short timeframe for submitting an appeal. Appellants have only three working days from the date they received the HO letter refusing or discontinuing asylum support (or five working days from the date the letter was posted) in which to fax, email or post their appeal documents to the Tribunal. Failure to meet this deadline may result in the appeal being considered invalid.

However, it is possible to submit an out-of-time appeal under certain circumstances. The Tribunal will allow out-of-time appeals to proceed if it is in the interests of justice, and very often accepts out of time appeals. Reasons accepted by the Tribunal include:- HO decision letter received late, advice needed to complete the form, health problems making it difficult to meet the deadline and not receiving a copy of the appeal notice in time. If the appeal is late, the reasons should be explained in the Notice of Appeal. If there is a clear explanation and the delay is less than a week, the Tribunal will normally extend the deadline.

Completing the Appeal Notice

The Notice of Appeal can be downloaded from the Tribunal website (see useful resources). The form must be completed in full and in English. Failure to do so can result in it being considered invalid and the Notice of Appeal returned to the individual. Both the person appealing and their representative can complete the Notice of Appeal but it must be signed by the person appealing. (See ASAP Factsheet 4 for filling in Notice of Appeal).

What happens after submitting the Notice of Appeal

If the Notice of Appeal is accepted by the Tribunal, they will write to the person appealing and their representative if they have one, giving them the time and date when the hearing will take place. An appeal should normally be heard 7-9 days after the Notice of Appeal has been submitted. In Tribunal documents, the person appealing is referred to as the appellant and the HO is referred to as the respondent.

Both parties will receive a letter called a Directions Notice - a list of documents and/or information the Tribunal asks the appellant and the respondent to provide prior to the hearing. These normally include any evidence that is relevant to the appeal. For example, if the person appealing has medical problems they may ask them to provide up to date letters from their doctor. Any extra documents requested usually need to be sent no later than noon of the day before the hearing, although the Tribunal will also accept evidence brought by the appellant on the day of the hearing.

What happens if the Appeal is considered invalid

If the Tribunal decides that a Notice of Appeal is invalid they will write to the appellant and their representative explaining why. Reasons why an appeal will be considered invalid include failure to include a copy of the HO's decision letter, failure to include the HO reference numbers, failure to include the grounds for the appeal and late submissions of the Notice of Appeal. It is possible to write to the Tribunal and request that they reconsider their decision not to hear the appeal. This would need to be accompanied by a letter outlining why the form was submitted late or was incomplete.

Tribunal freephone number : 0800 681 6509 (Monday-Friday, 9am-5pm)

The Tribunal has a freephone number for asylum-seekers or their representatives who have practical questions regarding their hearing, for example, the stage of appeal, when it might be listed, as well as general information on how appeal hearings are structured and what information they may be required to provide to the Tribunal. However, the Tribunal cannot provide information on how to fill out the appeal form or advice on whether an appeal is likely to be successful.
